Jody Shulnak, associate director of International Programs and Maggie Li, International admissions manager, presented graduating students with colorful stoles representing their country's flag. Students will wear these stoles over their robes at commencement.

"The honor is ours to be a part of your story," Shulnak told the students.

International Programs provides support services and opportunities to foster a global perspective and cross-cultural competence for Clark College and the communities it serves. The program also offers an Intensive English Language program. During the 2022-23 academic year, the college had 55 international students.

International students hear about Clark College in a number of ways. The college's international recruitment plan includes armchair recruitment, working with agents, both virtual and face-to-face recruitment fairs, social media campaigns, print and online marketing around the world, partnering with EducationUSA, and more. In addition, many students have relatives living in Vancouver or Clark County.

Shulnak said, "We offer holistic support for our international students. We also provide opportunities for students to study abroad for an academic term."

International students who are acclimating to living in a new country, culture, language environment, and college campus community, go through an intense adjustment period. Shulnak said the college community can help foster a sense of belonging for our international students by making an effort to learn their names, offering assistance, inviting them to share their perspectives, encouraging campus engagement, and generally creating a welcoming environment. As a college, adopting a culture of inclusion will help international student retention.

International Programs students were recognized for completing the Intensive English Language program, for receiving scholarships, being student athletes, and more.

Some students spoke at the podium to offer their insight and advice for students who are not yet graduating.

A slideshow highlighted the program's connections with students throughout the year, from a space to hang out in Penguin Union Building, to Sakura Festival, bowling, a Halloween party, and field trips to Port of Vancouver and the beach.

Shulnak recognized the program's 2022-23 International Peer Mentors, Sungmin Yoon from South Korea and Ziyad El Amrani from Morocco. The program is accepting applications for peer mentors for the 2023-24 academic year. Students need not be international students, but must be enrolled at Clark for fall, winter, and spring terms.
